

Distance Learning MBA (May 2022 intake)

Our programmes are regularly reviewed and updated to ensure that they meet the requirements of participants and the wider workplace, and we wanted to make you aware of upcoming changes for the Distance Learning MBA May 2022 intake.

Summary of Changes

In the revised programme, the main changes relate to the required modules and final dissertation.

- Environment, Social & Governance (ESG) has been embedded throughout all eight core modules
- The current core module Economics of the Business Environment will become an elective module, replaced by a compulsory exam-based module in Financial Management
- Accounting and Financial Management will be replaced by a Corporate Reporting and Decision Making module
- Innovation and Creativity in Organisations will be renamed as Innovation and Strategic Entrepreneurship
- You will have the option of undertaking either the current traditional Dissertation or a Strategic Consulting Project, which is a group-based intervention in practice
- Distance Learning MBA modules will be taught one at a time and in five-week blocks
- You will be required to undertake a face-to-face module
- You will no longer have the option of taking one of your required modules overseas, but instead will have a range of overseas elective modules on which you will have priority.
